Hi all,

Hope everyone is prepared to demolish a democracy sausage (or two) on the weekend, following an Eagles win tomorrow night. Nothing major happening around the office other than some fresh carpet cuts up on level 11, but in other news the WA 'Richlist' 2019 was released today and we were a bit disappointed to see no one from NOPSEMA made it. Although, if anyone has a cousin or distant relative with the last name 'Forrest or Rinehart', you're in luck.

On a serious note, political interest in seismic and drilling activity and NOPSEMA continues to grow with a series of recent statements made over the past week. Highlights include a joint media release from the Minister of Resources for Northern Australia and the Minister for the Environment today, committing to an independent audit of NOPSEMA's consideration of exploration in the GAB if re-elected. Opposition Leader Bill Shorten has also promised to commission a study into the environmental consequences of an oil spill in the Great Australian Bight, and also a review of offshore seismic testing control if elected. The Greens have also unveiled a plan for the GAB to be given World Heritage Protection....it's all happening!!

Message from blue girl: Congratulations to [redacted] and [redacted] who share the honours for round 8 with a score of 7! Apologies for not being the office to award gold stars and flash trophies and good luck to everyone for round 9!

Seriously we need to look into Blue girls credentials, still on top and still running the competition. Poor [redacted] is never going to get a chance otherwise.
